

Le petit prince d'Antoine de Saint Exupéry

A pilot grounded in the Sahara desert meets a young visitor from one of the asteroids which circle the earth. The adult whose artistic career was cut short by unsympathetic adults is enlisted by the young prince to draw a sheep for him to take back to his planet. We learn that the young man, after falling out with the rose he loves on his little planet, is out to learn whatever he can to improve matters. After falling foul of many selfish people on other asteroids, on earth the most unlikely candidates teach him all he needs to be able to get on better with his rose on his return.

French to English vocabulary

In order to make it easier for an English speaking audience to access the novel, the 12 page French to English vocabulary assumes a fairly lower starting point and a considerable amount of relatively high frequency words are given. Chapter and page numbers are given for navigation purposes.

Table with 3 columns: French terms, English translations, and additional context. Includes items like 'Un sac de billes', 'Le livre de poche', 'French street looking', etc.

Summary with verb gap fill and additional vocab and chapter by chapter questions

Keeping track of the plot of the story can be difficult for young students of French so the 10 page summary is designed to help them learn the details. Written with a focus on the action, the majority of the verbs are given as an infinitive to fill in with either the present tense or range of past tenses. There are also questions to go with every chapter.

Complex block containing a summary snippet, a verb gap fill exercise, and a list of additional vocabulary words.

Character guide with translation exercises

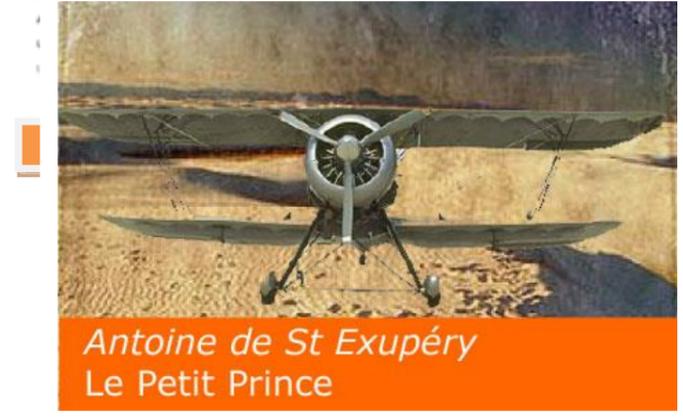

Encouraging students to talk with confidence about the characters in the novel is challenging. The comprehensive list of adjectives appropriate to this novel makes this more straightforward. Students translate sentences which demonstrate templated ways of saying what particular character traits reveal.

Table with 2 columns: Adjectives describing characters, and a list of adjectives like 'amable', 'audacieux', 'calculateur', etc.

Essay planning tool and sample essay

The essay planning tool takes the principle of the spider diagram for planning an essay. A flow chart shows the way it needs to be built up and this links through to a completed 400 word sample essay on the same topic to provide a model for future efforts.

Complex block showing a spider diagram for essay planning and a sample essay on 'Antoine de St Exupéry Le Petit Prince'.

The comprehensive tools and exercises to accompany this novel are designed to give you as a teacher the freedom if you wish to have several texts on the go in a class. Each text on www.alevelfrench.com offers the same range of resources so that language items can be taught as a class with individual students then returning to their own text.

Direct and Indirect Speech exercises

A two part exercise. In the first, the student works out in which situation each quotation was made. In the second part, the student makes a reported speech version of the utterance manipulating the tenses and pronouns. A useful exercise for evidencing without giving the exact words.

Complex block containing direct and indirect speech exercises with dialogue examples and a list of situations to match.

Exposé creation guide

The generic exposé creation guide is designed to give students a starting point for building up an oral or written exposé. Such heading as "Cause and Effect" and "Empathy" are just two of the many writing frames which will help begin the process of getting opinions down on paper.

Complex block showing an 'ORAL-LE TRACBUSTI' template for creating an exposé.

Themes of the novel ThemezRus

The student is given a collection of quotations to match to six suggested themes. Some of the quotations may be appropriate to more than one. After thinking out what goes where he is then encouraged to discover his own examples from the text.

Complex block showing the 'THEMEZRUS' exercise with a list of themes and matching quotations.

The A Factor

This exercise is designed to demystify the constructions which make for getting high marks for quality of language. The present participle, passive and subjunctive are all introduced with exercises all using the context of the novel. PowerPoints are available for the passive and subjunctive, both using AS topics as subject matter.

Complex block showing 'ALF The "A" Factor' exercise with instructions on how to use the present participle and passive.

Multi-tense exercise « The Tensinator »

The "Tensinator" takes a particular verb and gives an example of it in each tense with a context relevant to the novel. There are two examples; students are then asked to create their own. The aim of this exercise is to pull together understanding of how tenses relate to one another.

Complex block showing the 'the Tensinator' exercise with a table of verb forms and contextual examples.